

Blessing for Australia's Summer Solstice December 22

Hello to you all down there in Melbourne. Can't say I'm enjoying the weather, but it's better here than some places so I'm grateful for what I've got.

I just had my tank cleaned out and now I have gone from $\frac{3}{4}$ to a $\frac{1}{4}$ tank of water left. It should last about a month, so I'll join the ranks of Skywatchers hoping to see storm clouds building in the west. I think of those poor folks out west with no town water. At least I have the beach and creeks, so it's not so bad.

I see from the Facebook page that there are two beautiful girls doing well at Calisthenics (hello Rose and Zoe) and a Dad trying to catch up with them. Ha! Ha! (Hello Andrew) There's also two beautiful boys in our little family too, so welcome to Vincent and best wishes to dear Ariele and her family (Hello Ariele and Nathan, Jasper and Vincent).

And, of course, there's also a big Mumma as matriarch coordinating them all so expertly and achieving great things in the Surf Life Saving Club (hello Ryan). I'm so proud of you all.

I laughed a bit when I saw that Rose spent Mother's Day at the hospital. I went into emergency surgery for gallbladder on exactly the same day (what astrology was that associated with I wonder?) I hope your eye is recovering well, Rose, and Zoe is not guilty for the scissors incident. My blood test results were astoundingly good. All that plant based eating had a massive effect.

Best wishes at the Summer Solstice to you all!

Jessica, Mum, Dee Dee, Grandma and Great Granma
